Exams: Final Exam distributed January 6, due by January 17, 2007 (postmarked or e-mailed)

Papers: Students will complete one of the following. Final Draft is due February 7, 2007 at midnight (by e-mail or postmark).

#1. Apologetic Exchange: focused and annotated e-mail text of an apologetic exchange with a non-Christian. Target length (total): 3500 words. [Notes: (a) A first exchange (at least one substantive e-mail from each party) showing the potential of the contact is due on January 24. (b) Annotation/commentary should not exceed 50% of this exercise.]

#2. Meta-Apologetic Critical Assessment: a 3000-word explanation and assessment of a source published in the last ten years (1997 or later) dealing with apologetics. The assessment should focus on methodological matters. [Notes: (a) If a Rough Draft is submitted by January 24, it will receive comments and suggestions. The Final Draft would then be due one week after the comments were returned or February 7, whichever is later. (b) Only one student may write on a particular source, so first-come, first-served.]

#3. Apologetic Response: a 3000-word response to an attack leveled against the faith published in the last five years (2002 or later). [Notes: (a) If a Rough Draft is submitted by January 24, it will receive comments and suggestions. The Final Draft would then be due one week after the comments were returned or February 7, whichever is later. (b) Only one student may write on a particular source, so first-come, first-served.]
