—Classics of Personal Devotion
Dr. Frank E. Farrell
Spring 2007

Study of devotional classics across the centuries with special reference to their theological setting and their enduring spiritual challenge for Christians of our day.

Course Objectives

1. To aid students toward an integration of systematic and practical theology.
2. To provide broad exposure to major devotional classics which have emerged from twenty centuries of church history.
3. To encourage students toward personal growth through making this rich heritage a part of themselves and their ministry.
4. To develop students' critical faculties in assessing devotional works as to their fidelity to biblical norms. Students will be expected to express their own theological views orally and in written form.

Requirements

A. Reading

The textbook is Devotional Classics by Foster and Smith (Harper, 2005). This is required reading. An additional minimum of 125 pages is required.

Reading levels may be roughly calculated as follows:

A	500 pages
B	400 pages
C	300 pages
D	200 pages

Heaviness of material read is a factor. A report on reading (author, title and pages is due on 7/9. Please total your pages. Check to see that you have signed your report.

B. Research

Write a response paper (approximately six pages) on the work of a devotional writer, indicating what doctrinal view of sanctification is reflected in the material examined and your own personal response to the volume. The writer should be set within his times with enough material on his life and work to give an adequate foundation to understanding his thought. Suggested areas for research: how the author relates justification and sanctification, his interpretation of Paul's views, particularly as expressed in Romans 6-8, and the place of the Holy Spirit in his system. (Footnote documentation and bibliography required.)

Choice of a volume may be made from the professor's list or from the syllabus bibliography, including books by (but not about): Athanasius, Bernard, Francis, Loyola, Luther, Fenelon, Pascal, Taylor, Fox, Woolman, Kierkegaard, and Bonhoeffer.

Computation of Grade

- A. Reading 25%
- B. Response paper 75%
- C. Attendance will be a factor

Note: Papers are due on 7/9. Students will be asked to report their preliminary findings in class. Penalty for late work is one point per day (on the scale of 100).
