Reformed Theological Seminary, Orlando
Date of Course: March 23-27
Monday – Friday, 8:00 am – 5:00 pm

Instructor: John J. Yeo, Ph.D.
E-mail: jyeo@rts.edu
Spring Semester 2009

I. COURSE DESCRIPTION

An expository study of the message and times of the prophets, emphasizing the themes of the Day of the LORD, judgment, restoration, promise and fulfillment, Messiah, kingdom, and the new people of God. A Reformed biblical-theological approach (i.e., redemptive-historical method) will be used in order to unfold the meaning of the (Latter) Prophetic corpus in relation to its covenant Old Testament context. Its relation and significance to the New Testament will also be discussed.

II. COURSE OBJECTIVES

Upon successful completion of this course:

- 1) The student will be familiar with a couple of key interpretive approaches:
 - a) the grammatico-historical method and b) the biblical-theological/redemptive-historical method.
- 2) The student will be able to identify the message, historical context, and literary structure of each prophetic book. In addition, the student will be familiar with certain key passages found within the Prophetic corpus that will have been examined and expounded in class (e.g., Isaiah 53; Daniel 9; etc.).
- 3) The student will be familiar with the office and function of the Prophets (i.e., prophetism) and their significance in both Old and New Testaments.
- 4) The student will be acquainted with the main interpretive issues concerning the interpretation of prophecy (e.g., conservative vs. liberal views of authorship/dating; genre considerations (e.g., literal or figurative/symbolic); literary structure (e.g., the use of recapitulation); etc.
- 5) The student will see the remarkable development of the Messianic promise found earlier in the Old Testament, e.g., Genesis 3:15, 49:10-12; Num. 24:15-19; 2 Samuel 7:14-16; etc., during the prophetic period.

III. TEXTBOOKS AND OTHER MATERIALS
