STUDENT HOUSING

RTS

ORLANDO

Welcome.

I want to encourage you to take a look at the RTS Housing Community.

RTS is not just a school; it is a learning community. That means that we believe that we learn better when we learn in the context of real human relationships. Our experiences, biographies, perspectives, and backgrounds all play into the way we understand God and his word, and his work in the world, and so we seek to provide a community in which that learning process can happen.

The seminary experience can be high on information, and students often ask what they are supposed to do with all the information?

I doubt the question behind that question is, “Is this information important?”, but rather, “What claims does it make on my life?” and “How do I put it into practice?” This is where a learning community is so crucial to theological formation. God’s word tells us, “As iron sharpens iron, so one sharpens another” (Prov 27:17). As we talk to each other about what we are learning, what we think about it, and what it means for our lives, we actually help to shape each other, and inevitably we shape the churches where we will serve.

Another common struggle in seminary is maintaining connection with non-Christians. With all the demands of school, jobs, internships, friends, and family, it is easy to neglect our contact with those outside of our little bubble. The RTS housing community seeks to “spur one another on towards love and good deeds” by planning outreach events together and offering each other encouragement in our efforts. With 20-30 seminary students and families living in one location, we have a real opportunity to substantially impact the community.

It is my hope that, while you are here, you will take the opportunity to engage your fellow students and neighbors. The RTS Housing Community is a great place to grow in your understanding and love of Scripture as well as in your understanding and love for those around you.

Take care,

Scott Redd
